Saint Clare of Assisi was born into a wealthy Italian family but soon shunned her luxurious upbringing to embrace the life of piety and poverty. Inspired by the words of Francis of Assisi, Clare fled her home and joined Francis, establishing her own religious order. The group became known for their austere and devout lifestyle and for the power of their prayer, which is credited with saving Assisi from invaders twice. After Francis' death, Clare continued his work and broadened her own influence. Clare died in 1253 and was canonized two years later by Pope Alexander IV.

Correction: The July issue of The Knightly News incorrectly identified two individuals in the Helping Hands Story about moving household goods. The person whose furniture was moved is disabled police officer Gary Adler. The helper mis-identified is Greg Fournier, a brother Knight, who helped with the move. Under the picture of Scout Colin Saber receiving a check from the Council and Assembly: the correct amount of the check is $3,005.00.

all, Balaam's Donkey performed the wonder of speaking, but the Church never got around to canonizing it. Likewise, Caiaphas, the man who desired the execution of Christ, made the prophesy that it was better for one man to die than for a whole nation to perish, but this hardly guaranteed his sanctity. No, the way the Church has always determined the measure of a person is by the love they demonstrate. Such love, as always, begins at home. We crawl before we walk or run. And so, before we try to save the world or be Mother Teresa, we begin by loving the people God has surrounded us with: our mother, father, brother, sister, son, daughter, aunt, uncle. Often, just loving these people is challenge enough for a lifetime. But caring for them is the bare minimum, the basic training ground, the place we begin. Learn our lesson well there, and we shall be able to move on to the higher lessons of love in the Kingdom.

Today, make a special gesture of love for your family.

The wisest keeps something of the vision of a child. Though he may understand a thousand things that a child could not understand, he is always a beginner, close to the original meaning of life. ~ John Macy

Patriotism is taking care of your own

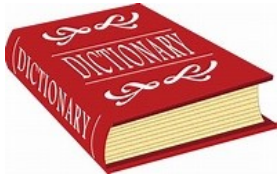

If any does not provide for his relatives, and especially for his family, he has disowned the faith and is worse than an unbeliever. ~1 Timothy 5:8

Christian faith has always been measured (in the Catholic tradition) not by miracles or wonders, but by love. Miracles alone do not saints make. After

Sermonette

Through God's help and grace we have the power to live our faith

Words are important for faith, but actions bring these words to life. Jesus has given us the words to ask for God's help and grace, and through that help and grace we have the power to live our faith. As we see in the hymn of praise from Sirach, which tells of many of the deeds of the prophet Elijah, those actions on behalf of the Lord are much needed in the world.
